Ammonia . Soluble Bone Phosphate of Lime 25.50 Undecomposed Bone Phos of Lime 6.20 Sulphate of Potash. 2.88
The most concentrated, universal and durable fertilizer ever offered to the farmer—combining all the stimulating qualities of Peruvian Guano, and the ever durable fertilizing properties of Bones. In fine dry powder, prepared expressly

After nineteen years' experience by the farmers of Maryland and Virginia in the use of "Excelsior," it is their unanimous opinion that an application of 100 pounds of "Excelsior" is equal to from 200 to 800 pounds of any other fertilizer or guano, and, therefore, fully 100 per cent UNIFORM QUALITY GUARANTEED BY THE MANUFACTURERS.

Farmers should see that every bag is branded as above, with the ANALYSIS and OUR NAME in RED LETTERS. All others are counterfeits. Price $50 per ton.

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 24

A Central Park Romance. Five years ago last July the wife of a well-todo provision dealer, while out in Central Park, accompanied by a little daughter, left the carrisge near the mall, and started off to erjoy the shady walks of the beautiful park. Little May gamboled upon the greensward and pecred into the hidden retreats, while her mother occupied a scat on one of the benches. Unnoticed by the mother, the little girl strayed out into the carriage way, which was lined with fast teams. A piercing scream fell upon the mother's ear, and springing up she was horrified to see little May right in front of a double team, whose driver was vainly drawing the rein to save the child. At the very moment when she expected to see her little treasure crushed or killed, a colored liveried servant sprang from a carriage, seized the child, and hurried it beyond the reach of the horses, was knocked down him self, run over and severely injured. The gratitude of the mother for the salvation of her child found vent in a profusion of thanks. With her costly embroidered handkerchief she stroked and wiped the blood from the wounds of the gallant mulatto, and after ascertaining his name, requested him to call at her house and receive the thanks of her husband. The lackey did call, and received a substantial present for his hravery, and was dismissed with the admonition that if he ever lost his situation he must apply to Mr.

Two years passed, and adversity robbed the provision dealer of the greater part of his wealth and he became a bankrupt. Six months later little May's father died, leaving his famly, consisting of Mrs. --- and little May, only a few thousand dollars with which to face the vicissitudes of life. The widow, who was still young, opened a fashionable boarding house, which she had furnished with the remnant of her late husband's estate, and cked out a respectable subsistence. A few months ago the mulatto presented himself at the residence, reported that he was out of employment, and was at once installed in the house as waiter and man of-all work. But the most remarkable part of the romance is that the fair widow becamed enamored of the comely charms of Henry, spent much of her time in his society, and finally, in less than six months after he entered her house, they were married by a New Jersey Justice. Henry is still the modest waiter and purchasing agent for the house, none of the boarders suspecting the new relations between the couple. It was only when the Justice called at the house a few days ago to see an acquaintance, and recognized them as the parties he married, that their well kept secret leaked out. The only reference to the matter in the city papers was a little paragraph that a lady living in a fashionale quarter up town had married a colored man, and by means of staining materials was endeavoring to make her complexion conform to that of her new lord and master. - N. Y. Con. Cincinnati

SHE "HAD HIM."-One of those little episodes that it is one's fortune to witness occasionally happened as the Long Branch boat was leaving her pier at New York on Saturday afternoon. As the cry "All aboard" was heard for the last time, a tall, handsome, well-dressed man, arrayed in faultless apparel, and bearing all the outward attributes of a gentleman in well to do circumstances, sauntered carelessly on the gang plank, swinging a jaunty gold tipped cane in his right hand. Suddenly there emerged from the dense crowd lining the passageway a frail looking, delicate little woman, carrying a babe on her arm, and dragging a child some three or four years of age after her. She caught the man with her disengaged hand by the lappel of his natty cost, and with a withering glance she said, "You will desert A CARD.—Circumstances rendering it described in Baltimore, I have transferred my DENTAL PRACTICE in Alexandria to DR. D. N. RUST. He has been for so many years associated with me as to need no introduction or endorsement, his skill, ability and reputation for honesty and high integrity heing well known. Learnially commend him from the plank. "I don't know you, lemme your family and not leave them a cent, will from the plank. "I don't know you, lemme go!" he said. As the boat slipped out from her dock the last seen and heard of the couple was the little woman tugging at the seemingly helpless man, and the words, "You will leave your wife and children, will you?"

> SWORDFISH VS. SHARK. - On Monday morn ing the yacht T. B. Asten, belonging to the Olympic Club, Bay Shore, L. I., started on a trolling trip off Fire Island, having on board the crew and members of the club, Andrew J. Dam, Richard Moore, D. Walter M. Fleming, John P. Smith and others. About three miles off Fre Island Light a bloody contest was discovered close to the yacht between a huge swordfish and a shark. Both were on the surface of the waves and the sea for yards was red with the gore of the shark, the swordfish having his sword through the vitals of the former, and both lashing the sea into a foam. The yacht came within four feet of the mons tere, when Mr. Smith plunged a boat hook into the wounded shark. Dr. Fleming seized the end of the staff, when suddenly both fish sank into the deep, dragging both Smith and Fleming into the sea. The swordfish darted away under the keel of the yacht, and the greatest anxiety prevailed lest he might return to the bloody surface and disembowel one or both of the men in the water. Both were expert swimmers, and through the prompt exertions of Messrs. Dam, Moore and others were hauled on board. Soon after the swordfish again attacked the belpless shark, killing him and covering the surface with his blood and vitals .-- N. Y.
